ABOUT US

Project Rebound Mission:
Project Rebound, a program for people in and from the criminal legal system that are ready and willing to become a part of a highly diverse and positive learning environment. Project Rebound is the catalyst to allow former prisoners to become scholars with the hands on support needed to feel empowered during the academic journey. Both staff and students alike pride themselves on being living examples of successful reintegration in a college setting.

Project Rebound was started in 1967 by Professor John Irwin. The program is staffed by students and full time staff, most of whom have had prior incarceration experiences. The program is an alternative to the revolving door policy of the criminal justice system. By offering a college support network that encourages students to excel in a course of study, Rebound discourages counterproductive behavior. The program seeks to admit full time students to San Francisco State University who are motivated to succeed in a field of study which leads to a Baccalaureate Degree.
